STORY PREMISE

A family and their friends become trapped in Daedalus's Labyrinth during a holiday in Greece. They must find a way home through an immense physical invention that can observe its visitors, learn from them and rearrange itself around them. The group must work out how the structure functions while moving through passages that can change. As they test its design, the Labyrinth learns about them in return. Finding a way out depends on their ability to reason together and maintain their trust in one another under the pressure of survival.

READER INTERESTS

For readers of contemporary mythology, survival, ancient invention and mysteries that reward curiosity.
